DUELISTS BOUND OVER UNDER HEAVY BONDS to be issued. DR. JOSIAH PENNIMAN

Mrs. Zella Wurgler, Who Was Injured, Is Still in a Serious. Condition.

Roy Browning and Leon McCaull, who indulged in a street duel Friday evening because of a dispute as to who should spend the evening in the company of Miss Ruth Reynolds, were arraigned in Police Court yesterday morning and bound over to the grand jury under heavy bonds. Mrs. Zella Wurgler, 828 South Meridian street, who was seriously wounded by a stray ing. bullet, continues in a precarious condition, and is under the constant care of her physician. Miss Elsie Wurgler, who was with her mother at the time of her injury, explained yesterday that they were not spectators but were on their way to a friend's

It is a matter of doubt just which one of the duelists is responsible for Mrs. Wurgler's injury, since each vigorously denies having opened fire. Mrs. Wurgler was unable to sleep last night and requires constant attention. The bullet was not ex-tracted and is imbedded in the back of the leg, very close to an artery. Her condition is dangerous, and the bullet will remain there unless there is danger of blood poisoning. Its proximity to the artery makes it dangerous to remove it.

AT THE PROPYLAEUM

Dean of University of Pennsylvania Addresses the Contemporary Club.

Dr. Josiah Penniman, dean of the University of Pennsylvania, delivered an ir teresting address on "The Old Testament in Light of the Recent Excavations at Nippur," before the Contemporary Club assembled in the Propylaeum, last even-

The keynote of Dr. Penniman's lecture was an expression of the theory that the Old Testament is not, though often so considered, a history of the world from its beginning. He stated that by some perversion of fact the early translators of the Bible have the date of the world's inception fixed at about 4,400 years, B. C., when in truth records of a highly developed civilization have been found during the recent excavations, which give authentic information of the human race as it existed prior to that time.

During the evening the members of the Contemporary Club elected the following nominating committee: Charles R. Williams, H. H. Howland, Miss Malott, Miss Shipp and Mrs. Bellinger. This committee will choose the officers and directors for the coming year and report at the next meeting of the club.

By way of so so SUGGESTION

May brides will find it worth while to study a new French fashion of arranging a veil. Parisian fingers have devised the coronet coiffure, pulling up a little of the tulle, so as to form a little crown shape in front and staying it with pins and the white roses or orange blossoms. Either the dressmaker or the woman who comes to do the coiffure, or a skilled maid, should be intrusted with the work. It must not be tried for the first time on the wedding morning, when all is in readiness to proceed to the church.

Possibly the dressmaker who achieved the wedding gown will also furnish the veil, and in this case she may undertake to form a coronet, and will then be the best person to whom one can intrust the affair. A coronet is very becoming and seems to add a little extra height to the bride. As the front portion of a tulle wedding veil is now almost always separate from the rest of the voluminous flowing of a veil, the coronet-making can be practiced beforehand on the detached piece, without the risk of mussing up the aerial tissue which is to cascade on the shoulders of the bride.

In a skirt that is entirely new the box plaits are laid close together at the top, widening out as they descend. They require careful manipulation, but are highly successful when properly hung. Another skirt, equally new and decidedly smart, is pin-tucked and plaited all around in half-inch plaits, which are stitched downward for two or more inches from the belt, thus securing the requisite close fit around the waist. At the foot there is a hem eight or nine inches wide, which is turned upon the right side and finished with cord, fancy braid or stitching.

PERHAPS YOU ARE among those who feared to brave the crush of bargain-seekers which present trade opportunities were responsible for Saturday. If so, here's good advice: Come down Monday. There'll be more than enough for hundreds more.

All the thousands of pieces of muslin underwear held in reserve for the annual May sale were more or less damaged and could not be closed out in a day; the hundreds of pairs of shoes could not all be fitted; it was a practical impossibility to sell all those dozens and dozens of corsets, and, as for the children's wear, much still remains to tempt young mothers.

Nearly everything is in good condition, but nothing fresh enough to warrant its being put in with regular stock. Prices? If anything, they will be cheaper than
